NOTES TO THE READER.

I. The Astronomical calculations in this work are made to true clock time. The effects of Refraction, according to the latest improved tables of Bessel, and the Equation of time, have both been applied to the times of the Sun's rising and setting; so that the Almanac, and a good clock, will agree the year round.

II. A Time-piece may be set very nearly true by the rising, setting, or southing of the Sun, Moon, or Stars,—but more accurately by the Sun (or the southing of the Sun, or a fixed Star), anywhere on or near the 40th degree of north latitude.

III. The time of the rising, setting, or southing of a fixed Star may be carried several days forward by subtracting, or backward by adding 4 minutes per day.

IV. The common day of 24 hours, begins at midnight, and morning (marked morn.) continues from midnight till noon; and afternoon (marked aft.) continues from noon till midnight; this should be remembered carefully when looking for the times of the rising, setting, or southing of the Moon or Stars soon after midnight.

ECLIPSES.

In the year 1880 there will be five eclipses, three of the Sun, and two of the Moon.

I. A total eclipse of the Sun on the 1st of First Month, in the afternoon, visible as a partial eclipse over the greater portion of the United States. At Philadelphia it commences about 10 minutes before sunset; at Baltimore about 15 minutes before; to all places west of the Meridian of New York (where the eclipse begins at sunset), and east of the Meridian of Denver, Col., the eclipse begins before sunset and the Sun sets eclipsed; to the western portions of the United States the eclipse will be visible entire, being total on a line drawn from San Francisco, Cal., to the northern part of Dakota.

II. A partial eclipse of the Moon on the evening of the 16th and morning of the 17th of First Month, visible as follows:

III.—An annular eclipse of the Sun on the 28th of Sixth Month, invisible in America, visible in the southern part of Africa and in the Indian Ocean.

IV. A partial eclipse of the Moon on the 12th of Seventh Month, invisible in the United States, but visible generally in Europe, Asia and Africa.

V. A total eclipse of the Sun on the 22nd of Twelfth Month, invisible in the United States, except the extreme southern portion of Florida and Cape Hatteras, where the eclipse ends as the Sun rises. Visible and total in the northern part of South America, South Atlantic Ocean and Southern Africa.

RISING, SETTING AND SOUTHERN OF THE PLANET'S.

It should be observed that these are not sensibly affected by the longitude of a place. When the hour is less than six, it is in the morning; when greater than six, it is in the evening.

VENUS.—Venus will be Evening Star until the 29th of Fourth Month, then Morning Star the remainder of the year. It will be at its greatest brilliancy on the 25th of Third Month, as Evening Star, and again on the 5th of Sixth Month, as Morning Star.

MERCURY.—Mercury will be brightest about the 11th of Third Month, 11th of Seventh Month and 31st of Tenth Month, at which times it will likely be visible, being then in the East just before sunrise. It will again be brightest about the 29th of First Month, 25th of Fifth Month, and 17th of Ninth Month, when it will be in the West immediately after sunset.

RELIGIOUS society, unless it keeps close to the leadings and guidance of the Spirit of Christ, is liable to be drawn out to look at what is going on in the world, thus being off the pure inward watch, and leaving its place of safety and impregnable defence, it, in a very subtle and almost imperceptible manner, becomes more or less affected or influenced by the elements which compose and agitate civil society. Our blessed Redeemer, knowing how susceptible we are of wrong impressions, cautions his disciples, "Take heed how ye hear." If human wisdom and judgment are suffered to take the lead, we soon approve of, and are ensnared by plans and projects which have been devised to sustain and perfect the Temple which the Lord in his wisdom and goodness has decreed shall have no other foundation than the Rock of Ages—the immediate and renewed revelation of his own holy arm. Oh, the loss which our poor Society is continually subjecting itself to in not duly estimating the unspeakable privilege of being permitted to draw near to the foun-

It now means flesh meat exclusively; but in early English it has the sense of victuals generally. It is noteworthy that in the meat-offering spoken of in Deuteronomy there was nothing but flour and oil. The original sense of meat is preserved in the phrase "grace before meat," that is, before food, or eating.

MEMOIRS OF JACOB RITTER.

My wife immediately perceived the smell of the yellow fever was upon me, and taxed me with having been among it. I did not attempt to deny it, but told her that I had done so in obedience to Divine command; "Well, then," said she, "I submit;" and from that time I visited all the sick I could, both Friends and others, rich and poor, and administered such consolation and assistance as the good Master put in my heart. Many of the Lutherans who looked shy at me after I had left their Society, now they were brought into affliction, received me gladly; and my confidence was strong in the Lord. At one place, I found the husband lying very ill, and his young wife standing beside him. He stretched out his hand towards me, and said he was glad to see me; that he was aware his end was near, but that he should die in peace with God and all men. I spoke what was on my mind, to him, when, taking my hand, he said, "Jacob, farewell! we shall never more see each other until we meet in Heaven, but be thou faithful unto death, and thou shalt receive a crown of life." I left him, and the next morning called again to inquire about him. His poor wife, with two little children, when she saw me, put her hands on her head, and bowing herself in anguish of spirit, cried out, "My husband is gone forever; thou sawest him last night, and now he is under the ground."

My heart was moved at her distress, and I felt more than I could well bear. I might relate many more affecting circumstances which I saw during this awful visitation, but in order to be brief, I let them pass. But one event now occurs to my recollection which, perhaps, I had better mention.

As I was going along the street one day, I saw a corpse brought to the Friend's burying ground, and only one Friend following it. I joined him, and we proceeded to the grave. He stood on one side of it, and I on the other, while the corpse was buried. We parted at the gate of the grave-yard, and each went to his own home, and we were both taken ill with the fever.

While I lay sick, expecting nothing but death, a man came to my bed-side and told me the Friend above alluded to was dead and buried. When I heard this, great weight fell upon me, and I thought I must die too; but suddenly my mind was raised, and I was again favored to have a transporting view of the heavenly land. I beheld the Garden of Eden, and saw many persons dressed in glorious habits, walking to and fro among the trees, which were loaded with fruits and flowers; numerous birds were singing among the branches, and all was peace and happiness. As I stood by the gate, much wishing that I might dwell in the garden also, I saw the Friend above alluded to walking among those glorious inhabitants; he advanced towards me, and I perceived he looked very fresh and fair. He said to me, "Jacob, the people say I am dead, but thou seest me here alive and perfectly happy." Then a delicious odor and pure air came from the garden, and passed quite through me, and I heard a voice say to me, "Thou shalt not die at this time; thy work is not yet done." My ears were then filled with the same delightful harmony that I had before a sense of, and the praises of the Lord were sounded throughout that happy land. When I came to myself, I found my wife leaning over me to ascertain whether I breathed. I soon revived, and began to recover from that time.

My dear wife continued to accompany me to meetings for some time, and was concerned to speak a few words in them, and in the last one she attended, she mentioned in German the parable of the Prodigal. About this time she told me she thought she should leave me before long; that she saw her end was approaching; that she believed her peace was made with her Creator, and soon afterwards she was taken ill. A little while before she died, she called me and the children to her, and after tenderly commanding them to my care, she foretold their future history, which I have lived to see fully verified in every particular except one; then taking me by the hand, told me she had seen in the clearness of the light of truth that many trials awaited me: "but be thou faithful unto death, and thou shalt receive the crown of life, which is laid up in store for thee, and for all them that love the appearance of Jesus Christ." She then bid the children one by one, and myself, an affectionate farewell. "Now," said she, "I go," and immediately leaned her head back on her pillow, and died.

While a widower, I went regularly to Friends' meetings, and many were my trials and exercises, both inwardly and outwardly. It would often occur to my mind, as I sat in meeting, that when I was a prisoner in the revolutionary war, I had vowed revenge upon those Englishmen and Hessians who had so cruelly beaten and abused me, and I would secretly petition my heavenly Father to enable me to forgive them, and to point out some way to overcome those feelings.

One night it appeared to me that I stood in my rank in the army, with my gun on my shoulder, and when I remembered that I belonged to Friends' Society, whose principle was peace to all mankind, I thought how inconsistent it was for me still to wear regimentals, and carry my weapons of war. I then looked round to see how I could get clear, and there seemed to be no other way than to throw down my arms, and desert; this I accordingly did, and as I ran an officer called out, "There is a man deserting, but let him alone, a faithful sentinel is on his way, who will stop him and bring him up, and then we will pay him soundly."

I heard these words, but dared not turn out of my way to the right or left to escape the threatened danger. So when I came to the sentry-box, a soldier in a red coat leveled his musket at me, and bid me stop, for he must bring me back to the army. I heeded him not, but, making a sudden spring forward, passed him, and he fired upon me; I felt the bullet strike my back, but was not wounded. So I ran on until I was too tired to run any further, and, laying myself under an oak tree, fell asleep.

When I awoke, methought I found myself in great darkness, and was at a loss to know what to do, when suddenly I saw a great light before me, and was commanded to arise and follow that light. I did so, and it led me safely; for I observed that wherever my road was rough and difficult, the blessed light drew near, and distinctly showed me how to step; and when the path was good, it removed to a greater distance before me. Thus, traveling forward, I was led down hill in order to pass over a frightful desert; the light now hovered about my head, and shed such a brightness on my path that I could distinctly see numberless reptiles and noxious vermin about my feet, but they fled from the light and hid themselves, and I stepped from one sod to another unhurt, and thus got safely over this dismal place.

My guiding light now began to ascend a hill, and I followed it; but I was now so wearied with my long travels, that I was obliged to climb up the mountain on my hands and feet.

When the vision was gone I came to myself, and was sensible that the Christian principle in my own breast had entirely overcome that spirit of war and revenge which had so long troubled me, even in meetings; and I was enabled to forgive my enemies, even those who had so greatly abused me, while I was a prisoner wholly in their power, and unable to defend myself. Yes! and I forgave them from my very heart, loved them freely, and could have received them as brothers. Oh, the power of this redeeming principle in the soul of man!

In the spring of 1794, I removed with my motherless children to Springfield, where I had bought a small farm, hoping my trials and temptations would be less in the country than in the city; but when settled on my farm, I found the tempter the same in every place. I attended Richland meeting.

My trials were many, both outwardly and in a spiritual sense; several good horses that I had, died one after another, besides many other losses I met with, so that I had a great deal to do with the wheelbarrow and the grubbing-hoe. I had also to walk five miles to meeting.

I was for several years much discouraged, but as I kept humble and low, trusting to the care of my Divine Master, I was preserved from murmuring. So, after some years, my circumstances began to mend, and I believed in the truth of the Apostle's testimony, that "bodily exercise profiteth little, but godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come."

Oftentimes a concern rested on my mind to open my mouth in meeting, to declare the dealings of the Lord to his poor servant, though in a few words and in a broken manner; and as I stood faithful to the pure principle in my own breast, I was favored to experience peace, and had also the unity and sympathy of Friends.

One day, while sitting in a meeting of worship, I felt a few words spring up in my mind to speak; but I let in the reasoner, and pleaded within myself that I was very ignorant, and was imperfect in the English language. So I put it by ; but, oh ! the darkness and horror that took hold of my mind ; I felt the terrors of the Lord for disobedience, and was fearful I was now forsaken, and should no more feel the reward of obedience ; I cried inwardly to the Lord, that if he would not forsake me, I would be more faithful in time to come. So one day, while sitting on the back seat in the Bank meeting, my good Master came to me again, and gave me a few words to speak. I felt very fearful—nature began to shrink, and my heart seemed to come up in my mouth, and I trembled ; but after awhile I stood up and said a word or two, and the people began to look back, back, all over the house at me, to see where the words came from, and it frightened me so that I poured it on them in Dutch.

When the meeting was over, I went away as soon as I could, and kept out of sight for awhile as much as possible, but one day I saw two young men getting into a gig, who laughed out loud, and said, "There goes the man that preached to us in Dutch ;"—so I felt discouraged, but William Savery came see to me, and said, "Jacob, thou preachest to us in Dutch, canst thou not preach in English ? we can't understand Dutch ;" I said, "my English is very imperfect," he said, "but thou can try, Jacob, I want thee next time to try and preach in English as well as thou can." So the next time I spake so well as I coot, part Tutch and part English." Oh ! what comfort I felt ; Friends were very kind to me ; they did not tell me not to speak at all, which I expected, but told me to do as well as I could, and I received great encouragement from time to time from William Savery.*

When Friends first proposed recommending me as a minister to the Quarterly Meeting of Ministers and Elders, I begged of them not to do so, for I felt myself a poor, dumb man, unfit for the service. So it was put off nearly a year, and I continued in my low and humble appearances as before. Then the matter was proposed to me again : I told them I had rather not, but at length submitted to the judgment of my friends ; and when they insisted on my taking a seat in the upper gallery, I did it with great reluetance, my mind being covered with fear and solemnity whenever I sat down therein.

I mention this little circumstance not to boast of my humility, but because I believe the cause of Truth has at times suffered loss by its professors being too forward.

In the year 1802, I married Ann Williams, of Bucking-ham, and soon afterwards we concluded to remove into a neighborhood more thickly settled by Friends, and accordingly I sold my farm at Richland and bought one at Ply-mouth, to which latter place I removed with my family in the spring of 1812. From that time to the present year (1827) I have dwelt pretty much in quiet, receiving all who came to my house; turning none away; until now, di-visions and rents have arisen among Friends, and many of my fellow-professors have turned their backs upon the gal-laries, because of disputes about faith and doctrine. Now I am clear in the belief that had we all attended faithfully to the pure principle of light and life in our hearts and minds, these disputes and divisions would not have been among us, and I am convinced that we never shall get back to the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace until we settle down in the everlasting silence, to the saving and redēeming principle in our own hearts; and blessed is he who attends strictly to its divine instructions and reproofs, which are the way of life and salvation.

Here the Journal of Jacob Ritter, as left by himself, closes. The last twenty-eight years of his life he resided at Plyniouth, a branch of Gwynedd Monthly Meeting, in Montgomery Co., Pennsylvania. Some of us were inti-mately acquainted with him, and frequently in his company, have heard him relate many interesting occurrences that are not mentioned in his Journal; and it is thought best to an-nex these to the foregoing account.

In his ministry, Jacob Ritter seldom mentioned the saered name, and when he did, it was with awe and rever-ence. He abounded in original ideas, and illustrated the subjcet before him from familiar objects of creation. His disposition was meek and unassuming. In humility and self-denial he was exemplary; and after passing through many trials, he became so much redēemed from the world and the spirit of human policy, that it is believed he never exercised the right of suffrageso far as to attend an election.

It is not recollected that he ever appeared in public vocal supplication, but in his appearances in the ministry, he frequently adverted to the duty and advantages of silent inward prayer.

In his person he was neat and clean, his dress was generally of a light color; his conversation was cheerful and mixed with gravity. In company he frequently related anecdotes with which his memory was abundantly stored, and they seldom failed to attract attention, while they were fraught with interest and instruction, especially to young people.

His wife died about three years and nine months before him, by which he sustained an irreparable loss. She was a true help-mate to him; a valuable elder of our Monthly Meeting during most of the time she resided among us, and frequently traveled with him. A short time before her decease, he paid a visit to a number of Friends at Gwynedd, and in one of the families he said, "When I was young, I had a wife and I loved her, but I hardly knew her worth; and now I am old, my wife feels more precious to me every hour."

A few days before her decease, he dreamed he saw his staff (a favorite cane he had cut in the woods, and had used nearly forty years) lying broken on the floor; this dream troubled him; when he awoke he found his wife, who had risen early, returning to bed with a chill and a pain in her bones that she said "struck at her life;" he immediately thought of his broken staff, but did not mention it to her. She died in a few days, and the dream was affectingly realized in the loss of his wife, who had been a staff, a faithful and affectionate companion to him for nearly forty years. She died on the seventeenth of the Third month, 1838.

In a Friend's family, not long before his decease, he related some circumstances that took place on the battle-ground at Chaddsford when he was in the army. He said he had been very recently on the ground, and saw the hills, the rocks and the trees that brought back the remembrance of the awful scene he witnessed when the desolations of war were around him, when the shrieks of the wounded and the groans of the dying were ringing in his ears. He shed tears at the recital of this melancholy picture of human carnage.

In conversation he frequently related the events of that day, with expressions of gratitude to the Father of mercies, who then clearly showed to him the sinfulness of all wars and fightings; who took away all fear of man from him; who plucked him as a brand from the burning; and led him safely along through deep suffering.

After the death of his wife he was very lonely, but continued for the rest of his days diligent in attending meetings both for worship and discipline, and occasionally visited his friends and neighbors, imparting counsel and encouragement to them as the way opened.

A few months before his decease, he visited his brothers at Springfield, and many of his former neighbors and friends with whom he had religious opportunities. On his return home, he tarried several days at Richland, visiting Friends and others. He attended meeting there, in which he delivered the following communication:

"Since I have been sitting amongst you this morning, dear friends, I have remembered something that I don't know I have thought of for seventy years. When I was a little boy about ten years old, I used to like to go to meetings sometimes. One First-day morning, I asked my father if I might not go with my comrades, neighboring boys, to Quaker meeting. He said, 'For what would you go to their meeting?—they don't have any preaching, they just sit still.'

"But still I wished to; 'Well,' said he, 'go; but mind and behave yourself.' So I set off, and walked about five miles barefooted; when I came to the meeting, it was late; all the people were in. I went in, and sat down behind the door. I looked round; the people appeared so serious and solemn, that it brought good feelings to my mind, though there was no preaching. Oh! the good feelings I experienced! so that when meeting broke up, I felt as if I could sit still an hour longer.

"If the children—the dear children—would but be still and try to wait on the Lord in the truth, he would in mercy draw near to them; for he loves little children, and sometimes graciously visits them, I believe, at a very early age. When I came home, my father said, 'Well, did the Quakers preach?' I said, 'No, but there are good feelings amongst them that are better than preaching; we have no such good feelings in our meetings.'"

From the period above mentioned until his entrance into the army, it is not recollected that he related much in the order of time, that is not contained in his Journal. In this school of adversity, his mind became stored with a number of anecdotes, some of which he related in meeting, and others by the fireside, with considerable force and interest.

On one occasion, he said, a young man was brought into the army and required to perform military duty; he said he could not fight, for he was a Quaker. The presiding officer replied, "But you are no Quaker, for you have not the 'cooterments'" (accoutrements.) The young man then produced some written credentials by which he proved his right of membership. The officer now called for a shears that he might trim him; and so he cut off his capes and his lappels, sitch a hair tail he had behind (a cue), and then said to him, "Now you may go, now you look more like a Quaker."

Jacob related this anecdote in a Monthly Meeting when the subject of "plainness, etc., " was under review, and went on to show that in the army it was considered an act of gross misbehavior and insubordination for a man to wear any other uniform than that which accorded with his rank, and the company to which he belonged; that the young man would have been saved a great deal of chagrin, had his "cooterments" corresponded with his profession; that the officer could not understand why he appeared in a dress having in many respects the semblance of a military garb, professing at the same time the peaceable principles of Friends.

He drew a very sensible conclusion from this anecdote, viz: that "plainness of speech and simplicity of apparel" were a much greater protection to Friends than many were aware of; that the most correct and honorable people of the world could not view a Friend, swerving from the principles of his profession, in any other light than that in which the officer regarded the individual above mentioned.
